Topics of Interest to Every Woman

EDITED BY JULIA CHANDLER MANZ

Boys and Girls Should Be Taught Hygienic Habits

By FRANCES SHAFER.

When a young woman consulted a physician for some trifling ill not long ago, among other questions he asked her—what about breathing? Do you take long, full inhalations?

It was foolish, but her only answer was a laugh. And do you know why? She thought of what nature and science had told her to do, then remembered her little, grudging breaths, so tiny that they scarcely caused a ripple, breaths that ended almost before they began, and it was so ridiculous that the laugh came before the next sober thought.

By all that was wise and hygienic she knew that she should have expanded the lower chest in inhaling, instead of which she breathed as if the air was tainted and her aim was to take in as little as she could and breathe at all. No wonder that she laughed—or wept.

And why is it? Surely we are lectured enough, down to the minutest details, and the laws of hygiene are put before us in newspapers, in magazines and by our family physicians. We know we should breathe deeply, exercise faithfully, sleep regularly, and be temperate in all things.

But with many of us the knowledge comes when habits of living are all formed and we are inclined to take the easiest way. If we had been taught all these things in school and at home perhaps we might take to them more naturally all through life. But as it is, we have grown wedded to old habits of breathing and other bad tricks that violate nature's most urgent laws, and it is hard to follow the very things we know should be to our benefit.

A Bit Bewildering.
Years and years ago school authorities insisted that the little folk sit prim and erect, with arms stiffly folded, as a discipline to their bodies, or their minds, or something else. Then some one discovered that the only result was round shoulders, and so the little ones were permitted to relax.

It sometimes is a bit bewildering to read all the varied subjects that folk think should be included in school training, but it does seem that we might better skin some of the frills that are creeping in and devote more time and thought to practical training in hygiene living.

There is nothing that carries down the years a greater fund of pure joy than perfect health, and many of our deviations from that fair estate come from a blend of carelessness and ignorance. Through ignorance we blunder into bad habits, through neglect we fall into another, and if, as boys and girls, we were started right it would be just as easy to take the right way as the wrong.

Matter of Habit.
For the wrong way may be very ugly, too, as well as hurtful to physical development. This morning I saw such a natty little girl and when I looked at the only occupant, a man, the first impulse was to call him a plain rowdy. But then I looked again—and I did not know.

He was young and fairly good-looking, but he was all bent over like an old man, his shoulders rounded out and his whole physical attitude an ugly slump. I suspect that everybody who looked at him at all instinctively straightened up and squared his shoulders, for it spoke so very eloquently of the rank personal carelessness. If he had learned to sit properly and to stand as he should, just as he probably learned to read and to write, perhaps he might not have fallen into that rowdy pose.

For habits take mighty strong hold upon most of us, whether it is the habit of stinky breathing or something worse, and they generally take their toll in lessened health, certainly in lessened grace.

When boys and girls are taught more hygienic ways of living, are clearly shown the proper course to follow and warned of the dangers of the improper, we shall not need so many unsightly distortions from nature's plan.

But it is only as they do them over and over again, just as they take their other lessons, that they will form hygienic habits that will make them healthier, more energetic, and far more sightly.

OLD-FASHIONED COMBS ARE FASHIONABLE

Back into the realm of hair ornaments have come the pins and combs of tortoise shell that typified the hair dressing of our grandmothers, and is traceable to the time of the Medici.

If you have some treasured heirlooms that are large, carved or inlaid, bring them out into the light of modern day and place them in the coils and waves of your hair.

Pilets of tortoise shell rival the high combs and the disks that suggest the Holland headpiece, or perhaps the ornaments of the middle ages have returned.

COAT AND VEST COMBINED.

Some of the new coats have a vest of contrasting material, which may be removed, if desired.

The coat used as the subject of this sketch is made of a wooly cinnamon brown material, with a lining of a little lighter shade, striped with black. The vest is of an ecru cloth, with buttons of the same. The large buttons on the coat are jet, banded with gold-stone.

CHRYSANTEMUM SHOW OPENS MONDAY

Department of Agriculture's Annual Exhibition to Display New Blooms.

The annual exhibition of chrysanthemums by the Department of Agriculture will be held in the greenhouses at Fourteenth and B Streets Northwest, beginning on Monday, October 28, and ending on Sunday, November 3. The house will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. of each day. The unusually warm weather which prevailed during the early fall stimulated the growth of the plants to an undesired degree and forced the blooms before the stems were fully hardened. In spite of this, however, the display is a very fine one.

The chrysanthemum show at Washington is one of the events of the year for florists from all parts of the country. Among the new varieties this year one of the most striking is the William Kiehm, with petals of deep red backed with bright yellow. The George J. Brudard has petals of red and shrimp pink. A noticeable white bloom, the Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, will attract much attention. Another immense white blossom bears the name of Christy Mathewson. The Manhattan is white, with a delicate tinge of pink that adds much to its attractiveness.

Smith's Seniors, Artistic Queen, and Mary Poulton, in varying shades of pink, will have many admirers, while Mary Donnell, Roman Gold, Ramapo, and Golden Ring will claim attention for their crowns of glowing yellow.

Mrs. George Burke and Francis J. Liff are yellow flowers of lighter but not less attractive shades.

These are only a few of the many splendid new varieties that occupy the center of the chrysanthemum house. Around the sides are growing hundreds of varieties of unnamed seedlings, bearing a profusion of buds that promise a gorgeous display when the exhibition opens next week.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS MME. CALVE

Music Lovers Given Treat at Columbia Theater—Galileo Gasparri Well Received.

Music-loving Washington was given a rare treat yesterday afternoon at the Columbia Theater, when Mme. Emma Calve, assisted by Galileo Gasparri, opened a local concert season with a programme that held a large and appreciative audience at eager attention throughout its performance.

Mme. Calve's voice should be placed in the category of immortal things; the things for which we are deeply grateful; that touch the heart and elevate the soul; the things that live in the memory permanently.

Following a Tschalkowsky number by the pianist, an aria from "La Tosca," and an Italian folk song by Signor Gasparri, Calve made her appearance. She sang warmly greeted admirers who had heard her in former years in the role of Carmen.

She was strikingly crowned in the latest mode, and wore a long black silk mantle that swept the floor. A picture hat from which flowed about her shoulders a richly embroidered black veil, the mantle and veil suggesting the Spanish atmosphere of the great Carmen artist.

After three numbers by the pianist and a short intermission, the remainder of the programme was given up to selections from "Carmen," in which both Calve and Gasparri displayed great dramatic ability.

Throughout the "Carmen" music the great range of dramatic expression in Calve's voice, from the most tender, caressing cooing to the most passionate tones of anger, defiance and terror, is truly marvelous. In the duo with Don Jose, "Non tu ne M'aimes Pas," her voice was in its greatest splendor. In the death scene the tragedy of her tones was truly painful.

Gasparri was excellent support. While his enunciation was not so clear as Calve's, it could be passed over in view of his superb acting and the finish of his dramatic tenor. His interpretation of the group of songs, as well as the dramatic spirit of the arias, was sincere and convincing.

The pianist, M. Emiliano Renaud, is a musician and careful interpreter. The difficulty of the accompaniments was a test of both technical and artistic skill.

Calve's "Tosca" by "Cocotte," was rendered with consummate skill in the working out of the motives. His own composition "Berceuse," a tender and beautiful composition, was delicately given.

LAWYER APPEALS CASE

John W. Patterson Asks for a Writ of Certiorari.

John W. Patterson, the colored lawyer, convicted of misappropriating funds collected for Cora Harris, a client, and sentenced to four years in the penitentiary, has applied to the United States Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari to review the case.

His attorney, Matthew E. O'Brien, yesterday filed a petition setting out seven alleged errors which, it is claimed, deprived Patterson of substantial rights, contrary to the Constitution of the United States. Notice was served on the Solicitor General that the petition would be called to the attention of the court and a motion made that it be granted on Monday, November 11.

Will Discuss Political Issues.
The policies and principles of the four leading political parties will be presented by the following speakers at the second regular weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. building: H. R. Stuteman, Progressive; John T. Kennedy, Republican; B. S. Stotts, Democrat; and S. E. Birmingham, Socialist.

BOYS TO ENGAGE IN BITTER WAR

Scouts to Take Long "Hike," Have Battle, and Cook Their Meals.

The biggest programme the Boy Scouts of the Washington Y. M. C. A. boys' department have yet carried out is planned for to-day by their scoutmaster, George H. Ashley, acting director of the Geological Survey. This morning they take a six mile hike out to the old fort on the military road at the north end of Rock Creek Park, where Lieut. J. O. Taylor, of the Army Signal Corps, will put the veterans through the same signaling tests as he gives his own enlisted men, following up the drill with a lesson in signalling for the new Boy Scout "cutties."

Then the candidates for second-class scout will get the lunch. They'll each have to make a fire without paper and with only two matches apiece to start a blaze with, after which they must cook a quarter of a pound of steak apiece and potatoes to go with it, unassisted by any utensils.

After lunch there will be a war game. One-third of the boys will defend the old fort from the rest, the weapons being sticks two inches long and about as big as your thumb. Any one hit by this deadly missile is killed at once, and when the scoutmaster blows his whistle the side showing the greater carnage is the one that is beat.

When the cruel war is over the party will turn its attention to hunting wild game. Some of the boys will put on appliances which leave a mark in the ground like a deer's hoof, and after getting a good head start the other boys are expected to trail them down.

Examinations for Second Lieutenant.
Examinations of civilian candidates for appointment as second lieutenants in the United States Marine Corps will be held January 7, 1914, it was announced at the Navy Department yesterday afternoon.

The examination of candidates will take place at the marine barracks, this city, and at San Francisco, Cal. There are fifteen vacancies of this grade to be filled.

Observing Anniversary.
The thirty-first anniversary of the Plymouth Congregational Church (colored), Seventeenth and P Streets Northwest, is being celebrated with special programmes, which began Sunday, October 6, and will end December 23. The church was established in 1881, and the original place of worship was in the old Catholic Hall, which has since been rebuilt. Dr. Alexander C. Garner is the pastor, and the special services are being held to raise money to free the church from debt.

STIMSON BACK AT DESK.

Secretary of War Returns from Speechmaking Trip.

Secretary of War Stimson returned to Washington and his desk at the War Department yesterday, after an absence of about a week, spent chiefly in speaking in behalf of the Republican campaign.

It was stated at the office of the Secretary that the report of the New York harbor line board, in reference to extension of piers at Hoboken, had not yet been placed before him. It is expected that the Chief of Engineers will pass upon the report of the New York board, and make a recommendation for or against the adoption of the suggestions of the harbor board. It is generally expected that the recommendations of the harbor board will be approved both by the engineers and the Secretary of War.

HUYLER'S NEW STORE.

Famous Candy Makers Open Branch in Riggs Building.

"Huyler's" famed throughout the land as makers of delicious chocolates, bonbons, and confections so dear to milady and men folks, too, open to-day their second Washington store in the Riggs Building, Fifteenth Street Northwest, next door to the entrance to Chase's New Theater.

This new store is fitted up in the style that marks all "Huyler's" stores with their beautiful mahogany and red tone effects.

A beautiful soda fountain has been installed and all the special confections to be found in the Huyler stores will be sold in this new store, which opening is a fitting testimony to the growth of Washington and the incidental trade development around the Treasury terminal location.

Estate Goes to Niece.

Marie Chambers in her will dated September 19, 1912, died for probate yesterday, directed that her entire estate go to Carrie W. Walker because of the care and attention she gave her aunt after the death of the latter's husband. The estate includes the premises at 125 Seventh Street Southeast.

The will of Charles F. Hadfield, dated December 21, 1910, leaves his entire estate to his widow, Edith S. Hadfield.
